SUMMARIES OF JULY AND AUGUST 1959 SETTLEMENTS[1]

The median increase provided by 102 agreements reached in July was 10 cents an hour; the median hourly increase granted in 83 August agreements was 8.6 cents. The average raise for the first six months of 1959 was 9.5 cents. No general wage raise was provided in five of the July settlements and in three of the August agreements; the remaining agreements averaged 10.3 cents in July and 9.2 cents in August.[2] The July settlements affected 89,100 workers in 16 manufacturing and in five nonmanufacturing industries; the August agreements covered 52,890 workers in 16 manufacturing and in six nonmanufacturing industries.

Changes in health and welfare and pension plans, paid holidays, vacation, or other fringe benefits were made in 75 percent of the July agreements and in 60 percent of the August settlements. These fringe provisions appeared in 72 of the 97 July settlements granting wage raises and in all of the five settlements with no wage increases. In August, fringe benefit changes were made in 48 of the 80 settlements providing wage raises and in two of the three agreements with no wage raises.

a. Total is less than sum of its parts because more than one fringe benefit may appear in a settlement.

1. Summary data include 43 July agreements reported in the previous issue of this publication.

2. The medians set forth here were computed from a distribution of settlements by amount of increase granted. See Table for the median increases computed on the basis of number of workers.
